Writing utensil for each player

A timer

To Play:

- 1) Print enough game sheets for each player to have games #1-#5.
- 2) Every player uses the same grid for each round.
- 3) Start the timer.
 - a. Learning the Game: You're a Beginner, so take 3 minutes.
 - b. Feeling Feisty: Ah, an Intermediate, you get 2 minutes.
 - c. Clearly Intellectually Superior: And clearly Advanced, so you get only 1 minute.

Begin the round!

- 4) Use the words in the game grid to create up to 10 categories. (The acceptability of a category designation will be determined during scoring.) A category is complete when defined by 3 related words from the grid. Words can be used only once (no repeating in multiple categories). Note: Not all the words will be used.
- 5) When the timer stops, all players stop writing.

Scoring:

- 6) To score the game, players, in turn, read their categories and answers aloud. Players mark their own game sheets by circling acceptable categories — those that do not match any other player's — and by striking through those that do match. Continue reading until all 10 categories have been marked. Each circled category is awarded 1 point.
- 7) While answers are being read, other players can challenge the validity of a category and/or category entries. The challenged player may defend their position, and every challenged category is voted on by all players (including the challenged player). Players who accept the answer give a thumbs up, while players who reject give a thumbs down. Majority rules. In case of a tie, the challenged player's vote does not count.
- 8) Each player marks their score for that round at the top of that game sheet.
- 9) After all 5 games have been played, each player totals their scores from all the game sheets. The player with the most points wins and earns bragging rights!
